

Church should fight false accusations

I am writing because of the constant false accusations against Catholic priests. I am a Catholic and have been to and volunteered for many other churches and organizations in the past. I am sick of people accusing someone of something that was not 100 percent proven and was also beyond the statute of limitations.

I can't believe the church has allowed this to go on for so long without refusing to fight these accusations. I am tired of hearing this and don't want to hear anything bad about an organization that has helped millions of people in poverty or low- and middle-income families like myself for years.

When the economy is so bad and people need help, I hope they realize this is where a lot of their help comes from.

Dianna Jasinski

Naperville

© Copyright Daily Herald, Paddock Publications, Inc.