Parish supports Jarmoluk

I am a proud member of St. Peter Church in Geneva. My husband and I have belonged to St. Peter for 25 years. I, like other parishioners, feel it is time we step forward to show how the majority of the parishioners feel about the persecution of our parish and pastor, Monsignor Joseph Jarmoluk.

When he first came to St. Peter, we had just finished with the construction of our new church. We knew we were putting it into the hands of a very dynamic and spiritual man who would continue to take our parish forward and extend its growth. In 10 years, he has done just that.

Our parish has grown by leaps and bounds. We completed another expansion to our facilities because our school was growing and needed to be improved. We needed to improve our parish offices and by doing so enabled the St. Peter Food Pantry to expand. We have also been blessed to erect an Adoration Chapel, enabling us to have our Precious Lord Jesus there for us 24/7 for adoration, which has greatly blessed the spiritual growth of so many of us.

We have expanded to more than 70 ministries, and participation continues to grow. I have been involved with three ministries and have met wonderful people within our parish who want to serve the Lord.

Through all that Jarmoluk has been through these past four years, he has kept the focus on our Lord and the parishioners of St. Peter.

For those of you not aware of the persecution of Fr. Joe and our parish by a very small minority, you can go to ctlnyc.com. Once you read the documents there and see a short video, you will start to question what is truly going on.

Then I ask whether anyone dare question the integrity of Fr. Joe. For those who do, I suggest you first look at yourself.
