Beware of VOTF, SNAP and CTLNYC Media's "Forsaken" Documentary

Beware of VOTF, SNAP and CTLNYC Media's "Forsaken" Documentary

We all know that VOTF and SNAP are homosexual or leftist front organizations trying to hurt the Catholic Church.

However, I just learned from a friend that the group called CTLNYC Media which is supposedly making a film about VOTF and SNAP activities is not to be trusted. A spokesperson for the film was "fabricating his identity" and "behave[d] erratically."

The people involved with VOTF, SNAP and CTLNYC Media all need to make a sincere repentance and go to confession

As my friend said:

"All in all, it's a three ring circus and something stinks about it and if I were you, I'd steer clear of it."

All Catholics should beware of VOTF, SNAP and CTLNYC Media. Please read the email below for more details.

Fred

Hi Fred,

I think I can shed some light. About a year and a half ago, I got a phone call from somebody who told me he was making a film about VOTF and SNAP activity who were unjustly accusing a Monsignor of hiding, aiding and abetting a pedophile who I believe was the parochial vicar in the parish.

At some point, parochial vicar admitted to abusing the young girl to the Monsignor who then turned him into the diocese, who called the police, etc. It turns out it was two lay teachers who knew about the situation and let the victim be further abused for quite some time before they took an action on it. My recollection is vague about how long these teachers knew but I want to say it was around a year. (Shockingly, the diocese is still employing these teachers!)

When the two teachers finally told the parents, the monsignor was notified and diocese and police were called.

Anyhow, Clohessey got into the picture and you will not be surprised to learn that he drummed up some small town shanty upper butt crack yahoos who were parishioners in the parish to go after - not the teachers mind you - but the monsignor.

This crew has been disrupting religious services for years and generally creating havoc. One of Clohessey's representatives who were riling this crew of parishioners up to disrupt religious services, etc., subsequently got arrested for public sexual perversion. Pot, meet the kettle!

I believe Clohessey, SNAP and VOTF tucked their tail between their legs and ran but the crew of parishioners continued to support the teachers who hid the situation - while going after the monsignor.

Typical nonsense. Luckily, as is typical, the monsignor has a good solid base of parishioners who are loyal to him and who are defending him through the injustices.

The person making the documentary that contacted me I later realized was fabricating his identity but at that time, I thought he was doing a noble thing and I still wanted to help.

I got some other high level people to review the situation and while they were interested, they wanted to know more details before they got involved. As I was trying to get those details, among the details, people wanted to know the actual real identity of the individual making the flick.

I had already arranged a meeting with some reputable Catholic leaders to help and as the meeting got closer, I called the "producer" and told him I was aware that he was not who he said he was and I had known that for a long time, that I was still supportive of the project but in no way could I let a meeting take place with other people unless he was going to reveal his true identity.

At that point, the man started to behave erratically. His behavior got wildly caustic and accusatory and I and my colleagues exited, stage right. Don't know who, what, when, where or why - but as a word to the wise, I would let the offer from CTL pass on by if I were you.

Blessings...

Hi Fred,

We've talked in the past about this and I see that the opposition is out in full force.

A bunch of sycophants if you ask me.

The TRUTH of the matter is that I've had CTL investigated by some friends at NY BBB. There is nothing illegitimate about this group. They have a mailbox at Mailbox Etc, like many small companies do. They are a very grassroots organization with less than 50 employees who have been in independent news and film for nearly a decade under various names.

That being said you have to ask why so many people try to blast them as being illegitimate. I find it funny, that just because CTL is a small organization they are less creditable than, say, Fox News, CNN, or the New York Times, which has blatantly lied in the past.

Just let them do their job. They are obviously somewhat legitimate if they have Lloyd Rediger, Senator Hutchison, and Archbishop Egan giving them scheduled interviews.

You should not be so afraid of the truth. You're worried about a small company that found something wrong in the world, and wants to bring attention to it.

What you have to ask yourself, both sides, is regardless if there is a slant or not in their film, if it's not true, then you have nothing to worry about. Either way, this issue is not going away, and those that are guilty are sure making themselves known.

Bochte. Burns. O'Halleron.

You know who you are. And most of all the parents of the girl who was "abused". It's hard to be abused when your parents condone you dating a priest more than twice your age.

Then magically file a lawsuit for big bucks. nice planning.

This whole thing is a soap opera. The fact that you fools keep trying to discredit it with your rants only makes it more spectacular.

America is gonna love you guys.

Anyway, Jermoluk, you're not a saint either. In fact none of you are. The brilliant part is how none of you are willing to accept this, rather, you all point the finger at everyone else.

Un-Catholic ingrates. Seriously.

God bless this documentary or fictional film, or whatever it wants to be. At least it's bringing light to those who are total bigots. Maybe when the world sees you on the big screen you'll be able to see exactly how lame you are.

Keep fighting. It's great.
